Abstract

While the writing of modern poems and fictions about the topic of 228 Incident has been extensively discussed, the study of classical poems about the topic is relatively unexplored. There is still no monograph about classical poems writing on 228 Incident. It is therefore that this paper will be a leading research about this genre. The paper is divided into six main sections. First section provides a brief introduction. The second section describes a basic definition and classification on the title “the Taiwanese classical poems writing about 228 Incident”. In addition, this paper will summarize the collection of related works in tables to provide further information for later researchers. Section 3 provides the extrinsic study of related works and its authors, trying to figure out the publishing time of works and the cultural position of authors. The forth section, which is the most important part, provides the intrinsic study of works, trying to examine the ideological contexts and multiple meanings of works through discussion in different respects. The fifth section evaluates the aesthetic values of these works. Finally, the sixth section is the conclusion.

Keywords: the 228 Incident, political literature, Taiwanese literature, classical poems of Taiwan, Taiwanese literature in early post-war period
